LOCAL ITEMS.

THE HOME SPRING.—Upon a hot day in July, the very mention of cool spring water is delightful—suggestive of shaded paths to pleasant dells, where the sparkling water bubbles up and runs murmuring over the smooth pebbles. Even now, in the midst of "Cameron," which brings its stream to our doors—somewhat heated by its long travel, to be sure, but very pleasant for all that—we hold pure spring water, that never so other places than those laid down by the Great Engineer, to be the best of all. Above the "Bridge Pump," more grateful was in "Gate Pump," exceeding "Yeates' Pump," and not to be mentioned along with the "Baptism Pump," or the "Virginia House Pump," or "Skidmore's Pump," is the fresh stream that gushes from the bosom of Mother Earth, to refresh her thirsty children. Yea, even incomparable "Diagonal Pump," useful as that has been in days gone by, to thirty thousand, spring water is preferable to three—cold as it used to be, when it came round in water-carts, with a negro driver, and was sold at a cent a bucket, and sat in a cool place in the pantry, where the cat would drink out of it when the lid had been removed, and then we had to drink it until the water-cart came around again.

THE SPRINGS OF THIS NEIGHBORHOOD, once renowned—scats of pleasant summer parties and sites of 4th of July dinners—excellent water they have for mixing—have of late been dwarfed into insignificance, and their very names almost forgotten. Yet a brisk walk to some of them, in the "cool of the morning," with half a dozen tumblers of water, might be quite as effectual to remove disease, and give tone and vigor to the system, as the far off fountains of health, which so many are seeking in distant lands. A citizen has travelled miles, and spent hundreds of dollars, to drink, during a few weeks of the year, water of no greater medicinal qualities than are contained in the crystal waters that bubble up from the "Old Sulphur Spring," embosomed in the woods, near the Powder House. Beside the Canal Basin, two streams pour out, side by side, Sulphur and Chalybeate water, of no mean virtues. Then there is the once famed "Federal Spring," at the base of Federal Hill, refreshing and delightful, and many a fountain half hidden by the moss in the valleys that lie at the base of Slater's Hill, and on the water shed which empties into Four Mile Run. Closer to town, the "Little Spring," as the boys called it, in the ravine that runs down to Yeaton's Marsh, from beside the Mount Vernon Cotton Factory, bubbles its waters. On the other side of the hill, a small but perennial spring has supplied the inhabitants of that vicinity with water. For one hundred and fifty years it is known to have been pouring out its grateful supplies to the thirsty earth. This spring is marked in the map of the District of Columbia, and is now the best spring in this neighborhood. Close on to the Hunting Creek Bridge, a spring nestles under the hill; and further down the shore, about on a line with Washington street, is the once noted spring that in days of old, supplied the frequent visitors to Broom Lawn, where festivals were held. In the swamp below Yeates' Garden, almost overgrown, but still not without vigor, "Tomkins' Spring" continues to furnish an outlet for its waters. Thence the tired soldiers, fresh from the battle, ordered to drink there, and they have done so, ever since they first sought the opening of this century.

ACROSS THE CREEK, Johnson's Springs, Emerson's Spring, and Gum Spring; upon the Canal, Arlington Springs; on the Washington road, Columbia Springs; and on the other side of the river, a pleasant spring near the Bluff, are well known to the picnic parties of this neighborhood, and many pleasant hours have our people spent beside them. Within the town, "the oldest inhabitant" recollects several springs which bubbled up, and ran down, as abundantly as they do now, within a few years. A copious spring existed at the corner of King and Water streets, the water of which was now carried off from the cellar of Gray, Miller & Co., in iron pipes to the river.

So they roll on their limpid waters all around us. Generations pass away beside them, and we may fancy that they murmur like the poet's "Brook"—
"Aye! man may come, and man may go,
But we go on forever."

PURIFY THE BLOOD.—MOFFAT'S VEGETABLE LIFE PILLS AND PHOSPHORUS. The high and envied celebrity which these pills have acquired, and the success which they profess to cure, has rendered the usual practice of pulling out all the nails, and the use of them in all cases of Asthma, Aneurism, Rheumatism, Affections of the Bladder and Kidneys, Bilious Fevers and Liver Complaints, in the South and West, where these diseases prevail, they will be found invaluable. Planters, farmers, and others, who once used these pills, will never abandon them. They are sold by B. B. MOFFAT, corner of King and Water streets, Alexandria, Va.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

MOVEMENTS IN EUROPE.
M. About's famous first pamphlet, full of suppositious matter as it was, embodied a large batch of truth; at any rate it has much of like character; at any rate it has much with which an American will sympathize. As no politics appear in France without the permission of the government, the mere fact of publication is significant of the designs of France; and if it forthwith, as to Germany, what a prior pamphlet did as to Italy, as to the purposes of that mysterious, wonderful man, Louis Napoleon, its sayings are worth regarding.

The great utterance, "Napoleon and Italy," was not more severe on Austria than is the present pamphlet. It says that "Austria represents the doctrine of the divine right in its most absolute vigor. Political and religious despotism, abnegation of the rights of the people, the most enormous concessions to imperial authority, and blind worship of the past, and an obstinate hatred of all progress; these are the worm-eaten basis of the Austrian monarchy." That's a drawing with sharp outlines; and the mere fact that the artist is allowed to draw it in Paris surely is significant. Having thus presented Austria, M. About coolly remarks of the Germans, "they know that in accepting the dominion of Austria, they must renounce even a hope of progress." And the saucy scribe proceeds to ask the Prince Regent of Prussia whether he sides "with divine right and the King of Naples, or with popular right and the Emperor of the French or the King of Sardinia." That's rich reading for warm days; think of popular rights in France!—Boston Post.

The Cincinnati Enquirer, referring to the result of the late breach of promise case in St. Louis, says: "We once heard an eminent judge, Jacob Burnett, observe, that his long experience at the bar and on the bench warranted him in saying that, in nine cases out of ten, in contested cases, he would, were he interested in them, prefer that they should be decided by the tossing of a copper rather than by the instrumentalities of a court. Such was his idea of the 'glorious uncertainty of the law.'"

NEW WONDERS.—The spaces of the solar system, or some of them at least, appear to be thickly peopled with small planets, or asteroids, invisible to the naked eye, or the ordinary use of the telescope. No less than forty-seven of these young planets are now known to exist between Mars and Jupiter, and every day we hear of a new discovery. The largest of them is said to be only forty miles in diameter and the smallest only four.

IF early breakfast were taken, in regions where chill and fever, and fever and ague prevail, and if, in addition, a fire were kindled in the family room, for the hour including sunset and sunrise, those then lying about animals of the DOG kind, running at large within the limits of this Corporation, the city being swarmed with worthless curs, without owners. Given under my hand at the Mayor's office, the 16th day of July, 1860.
